

Places of mathematical interest

Below is a list of places in London, which have a mathematical link. It is recommended that some of these places be visited in order to gain a better insight of Mathematics at work.

- Science Museum;
- Bank of England;
- Tower Bridge;
- The Guildhall;
- St Pauls Cathedral;
- Canary Wharf;
- Royal Air Force;
- London City Airport;
- The Army and Navy;
- London Stock Exchange;
- Imperial College;
- London School of Economics;
- London Eye;
- Greenwich Observatory;
- National Gallery;
- Tate Modern;
- Houses of Parliament;
- Natural History Museum;
- London Transport Museum;
- Ford Motors.

The following website contains places of historic mathematical interest in different places all around the world. Each place has been provided with pictures as well as a detailed log of the math used in creating the places or the maths behind the phenomena observed.

<http://www.mathourism.com/>

There are also many more places that have not been mentioned here. If you come across any, please feel free to inform us and we will update them on the website accordingly.